

Himalayan Balsam Removal

Date: Monday 23rd June

Final task of the year for the Himalayan Balsam Bashing team today.

We revisited all of our sites to check for any new growth coming through and were really pleased that all of the pulled plants from previous weeks are well and truly composting down to barely nothing. We did spot a few new plants coming through which were quickly removed.

We also made note of at least one more local site (by the back of the weir) that has plenty of balsam growing - but it was all in flower so it will need to wait another year before we bash it down!

Thanks to the team today, Alison. Nick and Karen
